

I urge you not to lower the No Call regulations for telephone service. Since Indiana initiated its No Call Law, we no longer receive unwanted calls from venders. Before this law was inacted, we told callers we do not purchase nor donate by telephone. I consider the telephone to be for my benefit, not for people selling or asking for charity. The Indiana law has been completely effective. If the FCC is going to change the regulations, I suggest that they follow Indiana's lead and strengthen them to provide all telephone subscribers the freedom from these unwanted calls.
